UniSA's International Centre for Muslim and Non-Muslim Understanding encourages scholarship that contributes to the development of Critical Muslim Studies as a distinct approach combining insights from post-orientalism, post-colonialism and post-structuralism. Muslim Studies is aimed at re-framing the Muslim question that haunts the contemporary world.

PhD scholarships are available for students wishing to undertake research within the field of Critical Muslim studies, working with a diverse and dynamic team of international and interdisciplinary scholars.

Value

The scholarships are valued at AU$30,000 tax free per annum (plus relocation costs for successful applicants residing outside of Australia up to a value of AU$5,000.

Research information

Applicants working broadly within the humanities and social sciences can apply. However, applicants' research topics should reflect the Centre's core interest in developing Critical Muslim Studies.

Eligibility

Applicants will have at least an undergraduate degree in an associated discipline with an outstanding academic record.

The Centre strongly encourages applications from individuals of minority groups.

The scholarships are available to Australian citizens and permanent residents, New Zealand citizens and international applicants.
